TIME TO FACE THE TRUTH ON PRISONS

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, the recent news that we now have over a million people in our State and Federal prisons, and over half a million in our local and county jails, is unprecedented in this country and perhaps unprecedented in any country.

We have to be looking for other answers than more and more prisons. And there are much better answers, both from the viewpoint of the dollar and from the viewpoint of humanity.

States are compounding the problem with passage of various legislation, such as "three strikes and you are out" in California.

A Chicago Tribune editorial commented recently on the State picture in Illinois. What it is really commenting on is about an attitude that exists, not only in Illinois, but in the Nation.

And what the editorial says makes a good deal of sense.

I ask that it be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The editorial follows:

TIME TO FACE THE TRUTH ON PRISONS

Now that Gov. Jim Edgar has signed the state's new truth-in-sentencing legislation, someone is going to have to figure out how to make it work before there is a disaster in the prison system. The governor is willing, but the responsibility belongs squarely with the General Assembly that created this time bomb.

When the legislature passed the law, it is a pity that it wasn't accompanied by truth-in-legislation legislation to give the public an honest portrayal of the costs. Instead, it pandered to the popular appeal of getting tougher on serious crime without regard to the consequences and without providing the resources to handle the added burden on the prisons.

Among other things, the law requires that convicted murderers must serve their entire sentences and those convicted of other serious crimes—attempted murder, rape, kidnapping, armed robbery—must serve at least 85 percent. That certainly resonates strongly with a public continually outraged by stories of violent offenders who serve half their time and commit other heinous acts when released. And certainly prison space and stern punishment ought to be reserved primarily for the worst offenders.

Truth in sentencing, however, focuses on getting felons into prison and keeping them there longer; it ignores the impact and fosters a myth that there will be no effect on the general prison population.

There will be a dramatic effect. According to the state Department of Corrections, it will add the equivalent of some 3,800 inmates at a cost of $320 million over the next 10 years—an impact that will escalate in succeeding years. And these will be the hardest cases, stuffed into a prison system that already is seriously overcrowded and may be out of space next year.

Anticipating this, Edgar proposed adding some 4,800 cells to the system, but the legislature—primarily because of Democratic opposition—cynically rebuffed his request for bonding authority. In short, the legislature was eager to flood the prisons with new inmates but not to pay the bill.

Now Edgar is proposing a different strategy: contracting with private firms to build a new prison and two work camps and add cells to eight existing prisons. The state would lease the facilities and run them.

There is merit to the idea in that it could get the job done, and the governor deserves credit for trying. But the answer is not some gambit to bypass the legislature; it is for the legislature to face its obligation.

First it must concede what it is not telling the public; that for every prisoner pushed into the system, someone must be pushed out the other end—perhaps sooner than the public will tolerate. Or the overcrowding will get worse, raising the risk of inmate violence and riots, and ultimately inviting federal court intervention to force Illinois to clean up its act.

If more prison space is the solution, the General Assembly must provide the money. If not, it must expand the concept of innovative alternative sentencing for non-violent offenders and revisit the state criminal code—reducing the penalties for lesser offenses and giving judges more discretion.

Truth in sentencing is an easy answer to serious concerns. There is no easy way out of the problems that it will create, and it's time to stop the pretense. •
